The decision in the case of Eugene Martin et al. vs. the Memphis and Vicksburg railroad, Huntington and Wilson, was rendered Saturday in the Federal Court at Jackson, Miss., by Judge Hill. An important case was decided in the Circuit Court at Little Rock on the 30th ultimo, affecting the rights of passengers on railreads. Mr. James G. Leigh had purchased a ticket to Malvern, and on getting on the train was unable to procure a seat. He told the conductor that he had beach and a seat of the s a seat. He told the conductor that he had bought and peid for a ticket which included the right to a seat, and unless provided with one he should not give up his ticket. The conductor told him he would be obliged to give up the ticket or he would be put off the train. He still refused, and was put off. He brought suit for $5.00. The seas was around by comfused, and was put off. He brought suit for $5000. The case was argued by competent attorneys and given to the jury, who returned a verdict for the plaintiff for $125 damages. If this decision is sustained, railroad companies in the luture will be compelled to furnish their passengers with seats if they would collect their fare. This will have a tendency to cause the roads to furnish better facilities for the comfort of their passengers.
